

On to Denali

Description

Our excitement was building as we headed on to Denali.

On our drive here we drove through some funky places – classic Alaska. One was an old hotel that was built in the shape of an Igloo, Igloo City, that has now been abandoned. Its parking lot seems to have been taking over by RVers.

default watermark

Alaska Day driving day 8 recap:

Road Name: Denali Highway

Road Type: 2-lane

Road Conditions: Generally excellent but with some construction just south of the national park, we lucked out as we did not have to wait long for the pilot cars, but there can be some longer delays

Miles Today: 144

Driving Time: 3:00

Total Miles in Alaska: 1727

Total Miles since entering Canada: 3721

A little hitchhiker also tried to come on board.

Our initial stay in Denali National Park & Preserve was at the campground nearest the entrance – Riley

It has been pretty rainy these first few days which we are hoping means that the weather will clear and we will have some sunny days as we enter deeper into

But we have had

our first bull moose.

And the rain also

the road for a long Breathtaking.

There is more to come, but we are headed to a campground 29 miles inside the park where there is no cell signal whatsoever. We will be there for seven days and are super excited!

Stay tuned for more!

~ Brenda

Category

1. Alaska
2. Our 2015 Journey to Alaska
3. RV fulltimers
4. States Visited

Tags

1. dry camping
2. national parks
3. rainbows
4. wildlife
5. wildlife refuges

Date Created

August 2015

Author

islandgirlwalkabout

default watermark